

The Gucci Ostrich Tote

A lot of cutting-edge fashion products are like modern art. Very few can completely understand it, but all try to make an ordinary looking thing appear extraordinary, rather unsuccessfully. Gucci's new Madison Ostrich Tote bag might inspire the same kind of feelings in you as well. You may be tempted to dig deeper to find something absolutely sensational in this normal looking bag to justify the price tag.

But then again it is Gucci so it is necessary to study the nuances of it before passing a judgement. Design wise it is not very innovative and you will never catch yourself feeling embarrassed about flaunting this bag. If money was not a factor then anyone would want to own it in an instant. But unfortunately, it is a matter, and when you are shelling out four grand, the interest levels cannot be hovering around mild it needs to be stronger than that!

Tan is always a useful, neutral color to complement any kind of clothing and occasion, while the rich ostrich skin is definitely a unique element to add that exotic touch. On its own the bag does not generate a lot of enthusiasm, for its plain mundane-ness. But when you place it among the whole line of the Gucci spring pre-orders, you know that you have a clear winner at hands. With all of the collection looking same with little variation, and having very little effect on our pulse rates, the ostrich bag looks almost stellar.

If you feel this new feel leather is worth the $3900, you can definitely give it a look, and maybe discover something which I could not.