

Lanvin Pillow Shopper

Coral is a very dicey color which is only a politer way of saying orange. I admire those people who can strut about in their orange garbs with lan as that is something I cannot do. We have our differences and consequently I do not brush shoulders with the color all too much. But with the new Lanvin Pillow Shopper in its bright coral color, I do not think my shoulders would have too much trouble donning it.

The thing with accessories is that there is a certain flexibility you can exercise with them which is not available in clothes. Like not many people would be comfortable to step out in a bold red dress but you would find many carry a same colored bag. This Lanvin bag too, falls under the same category. The dazzling color is capable of adding a zing to the dullest of clothes while the soft lush lambskin never lets you forget the quality of the brand.

However, like most things in fashion, the construction of the bag does not seem all too practical. The lopsided straps do not make it a comfortable over-the-shoulder bag. Although most fashionable bags do not follow the over-the-shoulder concept, it would be nice to see an exception sometimes. Who made the rule that fashion and comfort cannot go together? Even as I say this, my eyes keep diverting to the shockingly colored bag as I imagine the softness of the signature Lanvin leather, making it very difficult to debate the functional limitations of the bag!

If you feel that coral is your color and leather is your poison then you can purchase this bag at $1390.
