

Morpheus Passagen

Coming from H.R Giger, the Morpheus Passagen is a watch like never before. Being a surrealist artist who works in industrial and organic lines, the new Passagen watch from H.R Giger is based on the airbrush canvas of 1972 which is in turn supported on the German trash computer. Designed to look like a dress watch, the watch is light in weight too, weighing just 80g. The high contrast yellow digits on blank wrist hands make it easily readable. With a 2mm square of lume at the top of the watch, it takes a bit of effort to get the time right in dark. A must try out for all who love to stay in sync with the latest accessories style and fashion, Morpheus Passagen comes available in solid caseback with proper signature and serial number.

Strengths

A masterpiece in itself, the Morpheus Passagen watch fits like a non-screw dress watch that is easy to operate. Powered by the ETA 2824 Swiss Made automatic movement, its movement winds along smoothly and offers excellent time that is reliable and quite accurate. A must have for Giger fans; this watch is targeted for only a few buyers who love to enjoy the realization of uniqueness.

Weaknesses

The only odd that can be pointed out about this unique and stylish watch is its price. Tagged at a cost of $2,955, it may seem quite expensive for many. But when the popularity of H.R Giger, the popular Swiss surrealist artist is considered the products seems to justify its price.
